

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Biographical Sketch	iii
Dedication	iv
Acknowledgements	v
Table of Contents	viii
List of Examples	x
List of Figures	xiv
List of Tables	xvii

Part One Genre and Performance

I. The Canzonet	1
An Encounter on the First Page of The Sun	1
Definitions and Reception	2
Contemporary References: Authenticity and Domesticity	11
Gendering the Genre	25
II. Public and Private	35
“Moral Sentiment” and “Physical Truth”: The Upstairs and Downstairs of Anne and John Hunter	35
Separate Spheres as Critical Heuristic	44
The Staircase Flattened: Shared Spheres in Late Eighteenth-Century London	55

Part Two Canzonets Under the Clinical Gaze: Embodiment and Death

III. Sighs	66
Sighing Beauty in the Staircase	66
“A Pastoral Song”	71
Sighing Out the Canzonet	75
IV. Body Parts in Captivity	102
Pathologizing Women	102
“Despair”	109
V. (Undying) Death	115
Downstairs Death, or, Death’s Uncertainty	115
“Fidelity”	128
Upstairs Death, or, Death’s Muse	136

Part Three
Singing the Hours: Time and Memory

VI. Singing the (New) Hours	156
Death an Outcome of Time	157
Making Time: The Aftermath of the Horological Revolution	168
Time and/as Love	173
Productive Time	197
Ladies' Watches and the Futility of Fashion	213
VII. Singing the (Old) Hours	224
Writing Time Past	224
"Recollection"	233
"The Clock Still Points Its Moral to the Heart": The Pleasures and Powers of Memory	241
"Pleasing Pain"	251

Part Four
Afterlife

VIII. Haydn's Canzonets in Nineteenth- and Twentieth-Century Transformations	260
Appendix. Catalog of English Canzonets, 1770-1820	280
Bibliography	293