

Dear Colleague:

Cornell's Legal Information Institute invites you and any of your faculty to visit its suite during the AALS annual meeting in San Antonio.

If you have faculty or staff working on electronic course materials or Internet projects for whom any of the following topics might be relevant, I would appreciate your forwarding this invitation to them, along with any endorsement you'd care to give.

Russell K. Osgood
Cornell Law School

Cornell's Legal Information Institute invites all attending this year's meetings in San Antonio to visit our suite in the Marriott Rivercenter to:

- o Explore with us how the LII disk publications might fit alongside print in your class (whether or not your school has students who have licensed the LEXIS-NEXIS Student Office) (+To review the full catalog of LII disks, see <http://www.law.cornell.edu/disks95.html>)
- o Consider how your own electronic course materials might build on core documents already prepared in rich hypertext by the LII
- o Learn more about the new electronic casenote project at Cornell (liibulletin-ny) -- how we've organized law students to prepare short, timely case write-ups that are delivered to lawyers and judges via e-mail and the World Wide Web (++)For samples have a look at <http://www.law.cornell.edu/focus/bulletins.html>)
- o See the Internet-based video conferencing technology that the LII will use next year to implement a law course to be offered across several participating institutions

To avoid the worst aspects of a three ring circus, we have set aside the following times for particular topics or interest groups:

- Thursday, Jan. 4, 2:30 p.m. - Organizing a student-written, practitioner oriented electronic journal -- How we've structured liibulletin-ny
- Friday, Jan. 5, 2:00 p.m. - Ways students (and faculty) can use the LII's electronic version of the U.C.C. in contracts or commercial law
- Saturday, Jan. 6, 2:00 p.m. - Ways students (and faculty) can use the LII's Basic Legal Citation disk in their legal research and writing course
- Saturday, Jan. 6, 8:00 p.m. - Ways students (and faculty) can use the LII's electronic version of the Federal rules in civil procedure

The two of us will be available to demonstrate and discuss our video conferencing plans, to explore use of other LII materials in other courses including the Legal Ethics CD-ROM demonstrated at the November Keck conference, and pursue other topics of mutual interest - Friday, Saturday, and Sunday mornings from 8:30 until 11:30 a.m.

How to find the LII Suite? As soon as we have registered on Wednesday, Jan. 3, we'll post the room number of the LII suite at our WWW site (<http://www.law.cornell.edu>) and in the Internet work area of the Exhibit Hall. You can also catch us at the CALI members meeting, Jan. 4, reach us throughout the period by e-mail, or call either of us on the hotel phone.

- - - - -
Thomas R. Bruce and Peter W. Martin
Co-Directors, Legal Information Institute
trb2@cornell.edu - martin@lii.law.cornell.edu