Introduction

Since 1936, international student enrollment at Cornell has been tracked by our office. We are pleased to share this year's statistical report that demonstrates the impressive growth in enrollment and employment of students and visiting foreign academic staff. I also urge you to look at the comparative figures for the Ivy League and Friends beginning on page 26. Below are a few highlights of this year's report.

Worldwide flow of international students:

- In 1990, (latest available UNESCO statistics) the US again enrolled the largest number of international students, followed by France, Germany, United Kingdom, and the former USSR. In terms of proportion of total higher education enrollment, the US ranked 16th. The top five countries with proportionally the highest enrollments were Switzerland, Belgium, Austria, Saudi Arabia and France.

Nationwide trends:

- In 1991-92, the top five providers of students to the US were China, Japan, Taiwan, India, and Korea, while at Cornell our top five countries that year were China, Canada, Taiwan, India, and Japan. This year the predominance of China as a provider of students has dropped as expected with many taking advantage of a federal law allowing them to apply for US permanent residence. This year our top five countries of enrollment are Canada, Taiwan, China, Japan, and India.
- The proportion of overall enrollment of Asian students in the US has increased dramatically over the last 15 years and continues an unbroken increase since national records were first kept in 1954. On the other hand, the number of African and Middle Eastern students has been declining for a decade. From 1991-92 to 1992-93 Asian student enrollment increased 6%, European student enrollment increased 8%, while Middle Eastern students declined by 3% and African students by over 6%. Cornell Asian and European enrollment also increased this year, while the number of African students decreased both proportionally and in real numbers.

Campus trends:

- Continued international student growth this past decade in total numbers in proportion of enrollment, 2564 and 13.4% respectively.
- Record enrollment of 245 freshman and transfers for fall term 1993
- Nearly every undergraduate college increased their proportion of international students with the School of Hotel Administration leading at 12.6%
- Nearly one-third of all international students are new and nearly one-third of all internationals are females.
- A record 1022 foreign academic staff from 69 countries were appointed during fiscal year 1993 continuing a decade of growth.

Please remember the following:

- Only students fully enrolled for fall semester 1993 have been counted.
- Foreign academic staff appointed at any time during FY 1993 are included.
- Additional data on global and national trends are courtesy of Open Doors, 1992-93, Institute of International Education, NY.

Special thanks to Gang Wang, program coordinator, and Mary Arsenault, Administrative Assistant, for their design and preparation of this report; to Donna Bamforth for her diligence in counting the foreign academic staff; and finally, to Elissa Olevano, Office Manager, for her long-term commitment to maintaining an accurate accounting of international students. We encourage your comments and suggestions for improving this report.
