$1.55 postage paid

The cover is a new colored view of the Library. January shows Myron Taylor Hall through snow laden bushes. February is a new "ice age" picture of Taughannock Gorge. March travels to the gorge near Forest Home and there is still a touch of winter. In the Summer months you have athletics and Commencement. An airplane view of the Campus and lake give you a new idea of the present Campus. Order early this year if you want to be sure of a calendar.

TO GIVE COURSES IN PUBLIC PLANNING

Trustees Appoint Gilmore D. Clarke '13 to Conduct Important New Work in Community Development—Open to All Students

Beginning with the new term in February, 1935, the University will institute a new series of courses on large scale planning, open to all students. The Board of Trustees at its meeting on November 10 formally authorized the new work and appointed Gilmore D. Clarke '13 professor of regional planning to carry it on. This program of general education in a subject of increasingly important public interest is made possible by the Carnegie Corporation of New York. Dean George Young, Jr., '00 of the College of Architecture and Dean Dexter S. Kimball of the College of Engineering have been working jointly for some time on the plan. Dean Young here describes it for readers of the ALUMNI NEWS. Next week we shall print Clarke's picture and more about his experience and activities in this field.

Large scale planning is, just now, much in the public eye. To the layman the idea of a planned and controlled development of public and private properties as the necessary basis for better living comes as a fresh thought; but there is a small and devoted group to whom it is no new story. For a generation they have been working for and towards the ideas and ideals which are grouped together under various somewhat vague terms, such as "town planning," "city planning," "regional planning," "large scale planning," and so forth.

To Eliminate Waste

In this country these ideas began to attract attention when we came to realize that the uncontrolled and slovenly growth of our physical environment had produced conditions of disorder, waste, and ugliness that were intolerable. In the beginning, unfortunately, undue emphasis was placed on "Civic Centers" and "The City Beautiful," but it was soon evident that the fundamental problem lay in the waste of human life and effort that inevitably accompanies uncontrolled and disorderly development. It was realized that if controlled development could be substituted for uncontrolled growth, order would result and that, as a by-product, ugliness would disappear.

Such ideas appeal to the imaginative type of mind, and that is the type out of which crusaders are made. So we have had with us for a generation a group who, in season and out, have been preaching the gospel of controlled development. Naturally, these men have not failed to bring their ideas before educational institutions. Various experiments have been tried in schools throughout the country. So far the most concrete results have been in the establishment of technical courses in city planning at Harvard, and at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

At Cornell a different approach to the same problem has been maturing for a number of years. In 1926 William H. Schuchardt '95, formerly chairman of the Milwaukee City Plan Commission, retired from that position and joined the Faculty. He conducted a seminar in city planning, supplemented by a course of lectures given by leading men in the planning field, until his retirement in 1930, due to ill health. The basic ideas underlying his work were that actual achievement in city and regional planning is not dependent to any great extent on specially trained experts; that such work is necessarily collaborative and must, in the last analysis, depend on the cooperative effort of many diversely trained individuals united through informed interest; that the leadership of such a group will fall not to the person most fully equipped in a technical sense, but rather to that one who emerges from the group because of his talent for leadership and coordination; and that therefore one possible and promising educational approach is to present the planning idea to our future merchants, bankers, business, and professional men on whom the responsibility for achievement must finally rest, and from among whom many of the necessary leaders will eventually be developed.

Conditions Here Favorable

These principles have governed in all of the work done at Cornell up to the present. Most of the important men in the planning world have lectured in the series at one time or another. These lectures have demonstrated that interest in the planning idea is not confined to students in the technical colleges but is well spread throughout the University.

Now, through the generosity of the Carnegie Corporation of New York, this work can be carried to its natural and logical fulfillment. The Board of Trustees of the University has appointed as Professor of Regional Planning Gilmore D. Clarke '13 of New York, a well-known consultant. He will assume his new duties February 1, 1935. While continuing his consulting practice he will devote one half of his time to developing instruction along the general lines indicated above.

Conditions here seem unusually favorable for a strong development of this type of instruction. The student body is a fairly large one; it includes those from urban, suburban, and rural communities and from widely-spread political units. The University has already made notable contributions in the field of rural social organization and various members of the Faculty are active in the work, led by Provost Albert R. Mann '04, chairman of the New York State Planning Board.

To Appeal to all Students

The new courses will be set up with the idea of appealing to students in every college in the University. They will be as nontechnical as possible and are not designed for the development of experts. Rather they are intended to give a student whose main interest may be in Law, Medicine, Engineering, Architecture, Landscape Architecture, Agriculture, or what not, an opportunity to gain some understanding of a program that is daily becoming more important in its influence on modern life and thought. The introductory courses will be supplemented by advanced seminars and graduate work for those who want to continue. Through this supplementary work certain individuals will doubtless be drawn into the planning field as their main interest and will seek further and special training elsewhere.

The proposed courses are being sponsored jointly by the Colleges of Engineering and Architecture but neither college will schedule them as required work. Registration will be purely voluntary, and it is expected that the work will cut across college lines in all directions. In this respect the offering of these courses is particularly appropriate, since for a number of years there has been a definite effort here to break down the rigid boundaries between colleges by making the educational facilities of each college accessible to all students in the University. While this has always been the theoretical position, every college administrator knows that it is an idea which proves unusually difficult to work out in practice. Courses of the type here described form one of the most effective means at our disposal to encourage students to explore the resources of their University.

Although, as stated, the work in regional planning is not to be of technical character, it will inevitably make itself felt in the technical work of at least three colleges. In the College of Architecture the Faculties of Architecture and Landscape Architecture will be strengthened and enriched by the presence on the Campus of a man of such wide experience in park, parkway, and planning problems. In the College of Engineering, and especially in the Department of Highway Engineering, the offerings are bound to be influenced toward greater emphasis on the social and aesthetic aspects of highway and parkway problems. In the College of Agriculture, where already much work has been done on the problems of land use and rural social organization, the effects of collaboration in a related field will be especially helpful.

The success of any such venture is of course bound up in the personality of the man entrusted with carrying it out. Clarke comes to the work from a varied and extensive experience in practice. For many years he was engaged on the planning problems of Westchester County, N. Y., as landscape architect for the Park Commission. Among his other activities he has been engaged as consultant on many important large scale developments throughout the country. He is a member of advisory boards at Cornell, Harvard, and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; collaborator-at-large for the National Park Service; trustee of the American Academy in Rome, and member of the National Commission of Fine Arts.

SAILOR AT TEMPLE

As a feature of alumni home-coming day at Temple University on November 24, R. W. Sailor '07, editor-in-chief of the ALUMNI NEWS, will speak at the annual meeting of the presidents of Temple alumni clubs and associations. He will discuss "The Work of an Alumni Club" as a part of the morning program in the Alumni Room of Mitten Hall in Philadelphia.

CLEVELAND CLUB ACTIVE

Fred C. Kelly, lecturer and world traveller, spoke before the Cornell Club of Cleveland on November 8 on "Europe—Today and Tomorrow." Kelly had just returned from one of his several trips to Great Britain and the Continent. The Club meets regularly on each Thursday at 12:15 o'clock at the Mid-Day Club. All Cornell men are invited.

Dartmouth and Cornell alumni joined forces on November 17 to hear play by play football returns at the Hermit Club.

DISCUSSES ELECTION Cushman Analyzes Results

Dr. Robert E. Cushman, Professor of Government in the College of Arts and Sciences, discusses in the Sun of November 12 the significance of the results of the elections earlier in the month. Of the election nationally he says:

"The country on Tuesday gave President Roosevelt the most impressive vote of confidence any American president has ever received in a by-election. Running ahead of the most optimistic expectations of its leaders, the Democratic Party has captured more than two-thirds of the seats in the Senate and more than 300 of the 435 seats in the House of Representatives.

"Furthermore, the benign Roosevelt influence trickled down into numerous state and local elections which swept into office Democratic governors, state legislators, and even municipal officials who were shrewd enough to hitch their kites to the Roosevelt star. That this general election should have been viewed by the voters as a great referendum on Roosevelt and the 'New Deal' was both inevitable and desirable.

"Technically, we were electing members to the two houses of Congress. But in spite of the Constitution and our sacred doctrine of the separation of powers, the President of United States has been for more than a generation the responsible leader of legislative policy in this country.

"We do not look to Congress for legislative leadership, and certainly Congress has long since ceased to provide it. The business of Congress, viewed from the angle of political realism, is to scrutinize, criticize approve or reject the legislative program which emanates from the White House. President Roosevelt assumed the responsibility of that leadership from the first hours of his administration and has presented to the country his legislative policies in the form of the 'New Deal.' The country has now expressed its general approval of that program by electing to the House and to the Senate men who will support rather than oppose that program.

"The election can not be regarded as a referendum upon specific measures such as NRA or the AAA. But it is accurate to say that the voters on Tuesday registered their general 'hunch' that the Roosevelt plan for directing the affairs of the nation suits them better for the present than any alternative plans. No national election can ever be a referendum in any more definite and specific sense than this.

"The Democratic party, functioning through the Administration and Congress, is thus endowed with tremendous authority and prestige. It is of the greatest importance that it should realize that a corresponding responsibility goes with that power. It must combat the insidious danger of self-confidence. No greater calamity can befall a political party than to feel itself too securely entrenched. Abuse of the vast powers conferred in this week's election will bring a devastating reaction in 1936. We are in for two years of clearly responsible party government, not only in the field of domestic national policy, but also, with a safe two-thirds party margin in the Senate, in the field of foreign policy.

Republicans Need Leadership

"The leaders of the Republican party must view the election with what philosophy they can muster. It brings them a number of what may be termed negative benefits. They could not have gained anything significant even if the results had been reversed, for a Republican victory would have plunged the country into two years of deadlock government in Washington.

"Several rather obvious, though perhaps rather unpalatable, truths emerge from the wreckage. It is apparent that the party at present lacks leadership and that lack must be supplied if the party is to regain national confidence. It seems also clear from the defeat of some of the picturesque Old Guard veterans like Reed, Fess, Hatfield, and Robinson, that the Republican party is not likely to rehabilitate itself by moving too far to the right and by resort to the old slogans and the old exhortations.

"Now if ever, the party must address itself to the task of constructive, statesmanlike thinking about the pressing problems which new conditions have created. One of the most encouraging aspects of the election is the stinging rebuke which an anxious people administered to a program of purely negative criticism.

"For its own sake, for the sake of the country at large, and for that matter, for the sake of the well-being of the Democratic party as well, it is of the utmost importance that the Republican party emerge from its present state of disintegration into an effective, disciplined, efficient party of opposition, thoroughly fit in leadership and breadth of view to take over the responsibilities of office at any moment at which the country decides to place that task in its hands."

MARYLAND CLUB ELECTS

The Cornell Club of Maryland is holding its annual Feather Party November 23 at the Altamont Hotel in Baltimore. B. Otto Roessler '31 is chairman of the committee in charge, and it was expected that the party would be even better than last year, when 140 attended.

On October 17 the Club held its annual meeting at the Altamont Hotel, at which reports were given of the Cornell Alumni Corporation convention in Ithaca, and Theodore W. Hacker '16 described his experiences in Siam and his recent trip around the world. The following officers were elected for this year: Roger F. Hall '23, president; Frederic M. Wood '19, vice-president; and N. Herbert Long, 1009 Baltimore Life Building, Baltimore, secretary-treasurer.

Besides the regular weekly luncheons which are held Mondays at 12:30 at the Engineers' Club in Baltimore, the program of the Club for the year includes the annual get-acquainted party during the Christmas holiday for alumni, undergraduates and prospective students, and in January a special meeting when it is expected that Foster M. Coffin '12, Alumni Representative, will be present to give first hand news of the University.

Eduard Fritz, Jr. '20 is chairman of the Club's entertainment committee for this year; Hacker of the membership committee; and Wilson T. Ballard '15 of the Cornell Day Committee.

PITTSBURGHERS HEAR GAME

The clubs of Cornell and Dartmouth alumni who live in Pittsburgh and vicinity met in joint session at the University Club of Pittsburgh on Saturday afternoon during the game. A direct wire from the Cornell Crescent brought the play-by-play description.

NAME WRONG SCOTT

The Scott mentioned in our story of November 8 of the award of track cups should have been Charles R. Scott, Jr. '36 of Montclair, N. J., who received the John F. Moakley cup for the high jump. Scott not only won the high jump at the Oxford-Cambridge meet with a jump of 6 feet 2 inches, but duplicated the feat later in Scotland. He is the son of Charles R. Scott '00.

PRESENT REED PORTRAIT

A portrait of Professor Hugh D. Reed '99 of the Department of Zoology was presented to the University on November 17 by his graduate students and colleagues in the Department. The picture is the work of Martin D. Hardin, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Ithaca. It was formally presented by Dr. Julian D. Corrington '13 of Rochester, who was one of Dr. Reed's students, and officially accepted for the University by President Farrand.

Professor Simon H. Gage '77 described the early history and development of the Department of Zoology and the methods of teaching that were used before 1900, when Dr. Reed joined it as assistant. Professor Benjamin F. Kingsbury, PhD '95, who knew Dr. Reed when he first came to the University in 1895 as a student, told of their acquaintance and of Reed's work as a student, graduate, and member of the Faculty of the University.

The presentation took place in McGraw Hall and was followed by an informal reception.

WOULD EDUCATE FACULTY

To The Editor:

Has the editorial staff of the CORNELL ALUMNI NEWS a sense of humor, or did they make a typographical error when they headed a recent editorial in your paper, "Can Alumni Be Educated?" Did you really not intend to write an editorial and entitle it, "Can the Faculty Be Educated by the Alumni?"

If I am not mistaken, most of the alumni, at least those who received degrees, spent four good full years at the University, during which entire period the Faculty had a free reign in trying to educate them before they graduated and were entitled to receive the classification of alumni. If the alumni still need education, then it would appear that the Faculty had failed, and that after four years of fruitless effort, someone else might be entitled to the job, granting, of course, that the alumni need the type of education that your editorial would indicate they failed to get after four years within the college gates.

My own opinion for some years has been that the most inefficient institution we have in our modern American life is a college faculty. Wherein, may I ask, does the knowledge of a University lie? Does it lie within the confines of a limited faculty, the majority of whom have lived and stagnated within the University walls, without effective contact with the outside world, or does it lie within the confines of that great body of so-called educated citizens who comprise the alumni of the institution? Four years of academic training, supplemented with thirty or forty years of practical experience with men, materials and actual conditions out in the world, would seem to have developed a better educated product amongst the alumni than could have been produced by the life of tranquillity that most of the professors live. I am aware of the fact that a few of them, now and then, get out and make speeches, talk to engineering societies, and that every seven years some of them are shoved out into the cold, cold world on the grounds of Sabbatical leave. I always sympathize with the professors when their Sabbatical leave comes around as I feel that the majority of them approach the prospect like a small dog who is about to be kicked out of the house on a cold winter night.

Why not start a real movement and attempt to tap the great knowledge that exists amongst the alumni? We have, in that group, men of experience and qualifications, of proven ability, in all walks of life, men who would be willing and ready to go back to the University, and impart this knowledge not only to the students but also to the Faculty members who, I feel, are really more in need of this outside influence than the students themselves. I appreciate the fact that occasionally alumni go back and have a talk with the students, but the process is so occasional as to amount to nothing. With hundreds of alumni of proven ability, more or less inactive at the present time due to the business depression, what a golden opportunity there is to enlist an "alumni faculty" who could go back for periods of a day, week, or month, depending upon conditions, and carry with them a knowledge of the world in which we live that would be of incalculable benefit in preparing the students for the future that we have to face. Why is such an opportunity neglected? Why piddle around with the idea of a cloistered, protected Faculty, out of touch with the conditions that men must face in the world of business and human relations, being useful as a means of educating the alumni?

Again I ask, was the title of your editorial a typographical error or are you imbued with that subtle sense of humor often exhibited by Will Rogers?

WASHINGTON WOMEN

The first meeting of the year for the Cornell Women's Club of Washington, D. C., was a supper on October 22 at the home of Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist (Elizabeth Reigort) '19. Twenty-five alumnae attended, of classes from '06 to '34. After supper a brief business meeting was conducted by the president, Mrs. Edward L. Duffies (Florence Lumsden) '18, and Mrs. Gilchrist described her recent trip through France, Spain, and Germany and showed pictures and souvenirs she had collected.

The next meeting was a benefit bridge party on November 7 at the home of Mrs. Henry Giehner (Isabelle Saloman) '29. After cards and refreshments, the singing of Cornell songs was somewhat enhanced, it is said, by the basses and tenors of the many husbands present.

The program of the Club for the remainder of the year includes a Founder's Day banquet on January 11, a reception and tea during February, in March a conducted trip through the Bureau of Standards, and in May or June the annual picnic to which husbands and guests are invited.

The secretary of the Club, Mrs. Francis P. Keiper (Helen M. Fien) '27, invites any Cornell woman who resides in Washington and vicinity and has not received notices of meetings to write or telephone her. Mrs. Keiper's address is 2800 P Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

HARRIS '01 PRESENTS COURTNEY OARS

Recall Race of 1875 When Varsity Six-Oared Crew Beat Courtney's from Union Springs

At the Crew Club banquet in Willard Straight Hall following the Forbes regatta on November 8, Joseph P. Harris '01, through Professor Charles L. Durham '99, crew adviser, presented to the University two oars one of which probably was used by Charles E. Courtney in the race of his Union Springs crew against a Varsity and freshman crew on May 22, 1875.

The oars were given by Courtney to Harris' father, the late Owen Harris '74. Upon his death in April, 1895, they were stored in the barn of Joseph Harris' uncle, Orlando White of Lansingville, and were delivered to Professor Durham wrapped in the newspapers of the late '90's.

Dean Albert W. Smith '78, who rowed Number 2 oar in the freshman boat of that race, says it was really the turning point in Cornell rowing. In the two previous intercollegiate regattas, Cornell had been beaten, coming in fourth at Springfield in '73 and fifth at Saratoga in '74. John N. Ostrom '77 gained control of rowing in the fall of '74 and determined to take a Cornell crew to Saratoga in '75 that he hoped would win. He arranged the race with Courtney's crew from Union Springs to stimulate sufficient interest in rowing among the students so that money could be raised to finance the trip to Saratoga of both a Varsity and a freshman crew.

Much to the surprise of the spectators and of the oarsmen themselves, the Varsity crew beat the more experienced and heavier crew stroked by Courtney, raised about seventy-five dollars for the Navy treasury, and made it possible to collect enough more to send the crews to Saratoga in July, where they won the intercollegiate race for the first time. The late Webb C. Hayes '76, son of President Rutherford B. Hayes and crew treasurer, was largely instrumental in raising the money to finance the trip.

The Era of May 28, 1875, describes the spring regatta of the preceding Saturday as "the most successful one which has thus far been witnessed on Cayuga Lake." Following a race between a Junior and two Sophomore crews for the Sprague cup and the Tom Hughes cup, Charles S. Francis '76 and Frederic C. Reed '78 rowed single sculls, Francis winning, Reed's own scull not arriving in time for the race.

Then came the feature event of the morning, the Freshman boat stroked by John Lewis and with "Uncle Pete" Smith at Number 2 nearest the shore; the crew from Union Springs with Courtney as stroke and his brother, J. F. Courtney, at Number 5, in the middle lane; and the Varsity boat in the outside lane.

Of the Union Springs crew the Era says: "They were regarded with looks of awe by the students, who considered the chances of their winning almost certain. Indeed it seemed a little like presumption for a crew of students to contend with men so much their superiors in size, age and experience in rowing. The fact that Charles Courtney, the champion amateur sculler of the State, was one of the oarsmen, made the comparison between the crews all the more discouraging to Cornell men."

The Varsity crew, according to present reports, missed the starting signal, so that the Union Springs boat jumped at once into a lead of two or three strokes. They kept this lead by a powerful effort as the Varsity took the water with a short, quick stroke and fell at once into what seemed to be a continuous spurt, putting their whole strength into the beginning of each stroke.

"The Freshmen got off in fine style," says the Era, "pulling a slower stroke than the other crews, and slowly falling behind. For nearly a mile the two leading boats kept about the same relative positions, always lapping each other and not more than a hundred feet apart. Both boats were steered splendidly, hardly varying a foot from their courses.

"The way in which the University crew kept up their stroke began to inspire a great hope in the breasts of the students, who gave vent to their feelings in loud shouts of approval. The Courtneys had been pulling at a terrific rate, and some of the other men in the boats began to show signs of weakness; but the University crew still kept on at the same rapid pace, apparently as fresh as ever. Expressions of surprise, at their wonderful endurance and perfect unity of action, were frequent in every part of the train; and, when they slowly but surely took the lead and began to show clear water between their boat and that of the Union Springs crew, the enthusiasm of the students was unbounded. . . . Towards the finish, the Courtneys made a noble effort to regain their lost ground; but the men behind them were too much exhausted to stand a long spurt, and the University crew crossed the line thirteen seconds in advance of them, making the two miles in 11:14, without any appearance of fatigue. The Freshmen came in with a slow stroke, only one or two men showing any weakness. Their time was 11:49½."

The boating of this winning Varsity crew was: John S. Waterman '77, bow; Daniel O. Barto '77, 2; Edmund LeB. Gardner '75, 3; James L. Jarvis '78, 4; Albert R. Gillis '75, 5; John N. Ostrom '77, stroke. With the exception of Gardner, whose place was taken by Gillis and who in turn was replaced by Charles C. King '75, this was the same crew which first won for Cornell at the intercollegiate race at Saratoga in July of that year.

Dean Smith says that the revival of interest in rowing that year and the success of the crews was due wholly to John Ostrom. He not only made a scientific study of the stroke used by Yale which they in turn had copied from Oxford and Cambridge and trained the Cornell crews in it, but he introduced saner methods of training and infused a spirit of cheerfulness in the oarsmen which helped them to win. Because of the general discouragement over losing the races at Springfield in '73 and at Saratoga in '74, there was, until Ostrom took control, no probability of raising the money to send even one crew to Saratoga that year. The result of the race with Courtney's crew which he arranged, and improved spirits of both oarsmen and students for which he was responsible, were directly the means of raising funds to send to Saratoga the crew which swept the water for Cornell for the first time in an intercollegiate race.

At the Crew Club banquet several speakers expressed the University's gratification to Harris for presenting these historic oars to be added to the collection of Cornell crew trophies.

LAW SOCIETY MEETS

Placement work of the Cornell Law Association is to be extended by the establishment of a central placement office at the Law School in Ithaca, it was voted following a report by Herman Wolkinson '25 at the annual meeting of the Association, held in Myron Taylor Hall on November 17. Wolkinson, who has been in charge of the work of the Law Association placement committee in New York, reported that all Law School graduates of recent years are now employed.

The annual meeting of the Association was presided over by New York Supreme Court Justice William F. Bleakley '04, who was re-elected president of the Association. The secretary, Professor John W. MacDonald '25, also re-elected, gave a report, and Neal Dow Becker '05, president of the Cornellian Council, told of the reorganization of the Council's committee on bequests.

Besides the re-election of the president and secretary, the executive committee of the Association elected the following vice-presidents: Edward Harris '00, Rochester; James P. Harrold '93, Chicago, Ill.; Alfred Huger '03, Charleston, S. C.; James B. Kinne '02, Seattle, Wash.; Frank B. Ingersoll '16, Pittsburgh, Pa.; William D. P. Carey '23, Hutchinson, Kan.; Paul Overton '00, Los Angeles, Cal.; William L. Ransom '05, New York City; Oley D. Roats '06, Springfield, Mass.; Christopher W. Wilson '00 Brooklyn, and Edwin H. Woodruff '88, Ithaca. George R. Grant '04, Boston, Mass., Percy W. Phillips '15, Washington, D. C., and George R. VanNamee '02, New York City were elected members of the executive committee for three year terms.

FEDERATION APPOINTS

Helen E. C. Gillespie '30, of Syracuse, has been appointed third vice-president of the Federation of Cornell Women's Clubs to fill the vacancy caused by the death last July of Mrs. Theodore Wood (Ivalo Hugg) '18. Arrangements for Cornell Day for high school and preparatory school women, to be held on the Campus next Spring, will be in charge of a committee of the Federation of which Miss Gillespie is chairman.

PENN GAME DINNER

Professor Herman Diederichs '97 chairman of the University committee on athletic control, will be the principal speaker at the dinner and smoker of the Cornell Club of Philadelphia the evening before the Pennsylvania game. He will discuss the present athletic situation at the University. R. W. Sailor '07, editor-in-chief of the ALUMNI NEWS, will be toastmaster.

The Club invites all alumni in town for the game to attend the dinner, which will be held at the Walton Hotel at 6:30, Wednesday, November 28.

NEW ENGLAND BEAN POT

The Cornell Bean Pot for September-October, 1934, published by the Cornell Club of New England, is an attractive and interesting four-page sheet, just received. It reports the annual Wash of the Club held last summer, carries various items on general University affairs, comments on the interesting luncheon talk given September 24 by Stanley P. Lovell '12, chemist and patent attorney recently returned from Europe, and has an obituary of Dr. Howard P. Bellows '75, who died at his home in Cambridge on October 16. A new feature in this issue, which is Volume 4, No. 3, is a column of Campus gossip written by Hugh Burr, freshman in Architecture from Belmont, Mass.

John A. Chambers, 75 Federal Street, Boston, appears as editor of the Bean Pot, with Charles M. Werly '27 and Frank Idell '28 as assistant editors. Officers of the Cornell Club of New England for this year are George S. Tompkins '96, president; Walter P Phillips '16, vice-president; Anthony O. Shallna '16, 305 Harvard Street, Cambridge, secretary; and Thomas Dransfield '10, treasurer. Vice-president for Rhode Island is H. Hunt Bradley '02; for New Hampshire, Vasco E. Nunez '11; and for Central Massachusetts, John P. Franklin '19. The Club's alumni representative is Chester T. Reed '03 of Worcester, and the athletic director is Francis A. Nicolls '13.

PLACEMENT BUREAU GETS RESULTS

Report Jobs Obtained, Employers Assisted and Groundwork Laid for Valuable Future Service to Graduates

In less than a year and a half since it was established, the University Placement Bureau, under the direction of Herbert H. Williams '25, is not only succeeding in bringing men and jobs together, but is building valuable connections for the future.

Opened at a time when almost all concerns were reducing rather than increasing their staffs, it has endeavored to develop among industrial and commercial concerns a clientele which would, under more favorable circumstances, have positions for many Cornell graduates.

While this groundwork is being laid, a considerable amount of placement work has been done, absorbing more and more of the time of the Bureau as registrations and job-calls have increased. The following tabulation gives in brief some of the more tangible results that have been achieved since July, 1933. All seniors are more or less automatically registered with the Bureau.

ALUMNI REGISTRANTS

Active.....	351
Inactive.....	119

PLACEMENTS

Seniors first jobs.....	31
Alumni permanent jobs.....	23
Alumni temporary jobs.....	28
Recommendations made.....	150
Total job-calls received.....	212

In addition to these the Bureau has participated in numerous placements which have been made by the several colleges, by individual Faculty members, and by alumni clubs. Further, more than a few seniors and alumni have been aided directly and indirectly in getting jobs but of whom the Bureau has no final reports.

So far as possible, qualified alumni have been notified of coming civil service examinations. As a result several persons not included in the above tabulation have obtained work.

In the course of its work, the Bureau has mailed to persons on its lists more than 3,000 letters describing its services, and about 1,500 letters concerning specific openings. Thirty-two employers personally visited the Bureau's offices in Willard Straight Hall, and 244 interviews have taken place with alumni registrants. At least one, and often several interviews have been held by the Director with each senior registrant.

The work which the Placement Bureau is doing in connection with the Federal Emergency Relief Administration's student-aid program has been valuable not only to the students aided and to their employers, but to the Bureau itself as a means of contact with the undergraduates. This year 651 students are employed in useful work in the various University departments and in Ithaca. These students earn an average of $15 a month through F.E.R.A. funds. The selection of students, location of suitable jobs, and general administration of the program has been a part of the Bureau's work.

The services of the University Placement Bureau entail no expense to those registered or to those who obtain employment with its aid. It is supported by a University appropriation and by alumni contributions. The University has furnished a major portion of the funds, but more than a hundred alumni have assisted by contributions made through the Cornellian Council. The Bureau is soliciting more contributions from alumni to carry on its work adequately.

PHILADELPHIA WOMEN

The annual business meeting of the Cornell Women's Club of Philadelphia was held November 2 at the home of Mrs. Russell C. Gourley (Margaret W. Gushee) '16. The twenty-seven members present discussed programs for ensuing meetings and laid plans for a Christman party to be held early in December for the purpose of filling stockings for needy children.

The officers for the coming year are: president, Mrs. Franklin H. Pennell (Emily Whitten Auge) '27; vice-president, Mrs. C. L. Shollenberger (Gladys F. Swartley) '16; secretary, Mildred H. Hiller '25; treasurer, Gertrude Goodwin '31; directors, Ruth Ayers '96 and Mrs. Philip H. Carlin (Dorothy W. Allison) '24.

ROCHESTER HEARS SUTTON

Dr. George M. Sutton, Ph.D. '32, curator of birds at the University, was the guest speaker at a dinner meeting of the Cornell Club of Rochester held at the University Club November 14. Dr. Sutton, who ranks as one of the foremost painters of bird life, told of his experiences in the North Country among the Eskimos. Members of the Dartmouth Club of Rochester were guests of the Cornell men.

DEAN KIMBALL HONORED

Dean Dexter S. Kimball has been invited to deliver the Henry R. Townie lecture at the annual meeting of The American Society of Mechanical Engineers in New York City in December. The Townie lecture is one of two given annually at the annual convention of the Society. It was founded in honor of Henry R. Townie, president of the firm of Yale & Townie Manufacturing Company, who was one of the first engineers to study the field of industrial economics. His paper on "The Engineer as an Economist," presented before the Society in 1886, was the beginning of what has become a vast literature.

The Townie lecturer is expected to discuss some phase of industrial economics. At the annual meeting last year Dean Kimball was awarded the Worcester Warner medal for his contribution to the literature of this subject.

The other lecture was founded in honor of the late Robert H. Thurston, Director of Sibley College from 1895 to 1903. The Thurston lecturer is expected to discuss scientific phases of engineering or the sciences on which it rests. Dr. Thurston was the first President of the Society. Dean Kimball was president in 1921.

About ATHLETICS

TEAM UPSETS SCOFFERS Beats Dartmouth 21-6

Last year's history repeated itself Saturday as the football team came back handsomely in every particular to defeat decisively a Dartmouth team that two weeks ago was considered one of the best in the country. This was the same Cornell team that lost to Columbia, Princeton, Syracuse, and Richmond; but the 12,000 excited spectators at Schoellkopf Field on Saturday saw a well-drilled, well-generalized, fighting eleven that missed few opportunities to gain, whose line performed efficiently, and whose passing attack was heady, quick and successful. The Green was clearly outplayed, both in the air and on the ground, and plainly disconcerted by the unexpected power of the Varsity warriors.

Switzer Runs Team Well

The score of 21-6 reflected not only the superiority of the Red team, but the canny generalship of Switzer. In the second half, the team having conclusively demonstrated its power, with a safe lead of a touchdown and two conversions, he kept the play in enemy territory, but did not attempt to force the advantage. Here they defended against the frantic Green passing attempts, and finally, with but two and a half minutes to play, Switzer intercepted a pass on the Cornell 42-yard line and shook off Green tacklers for 58 yards along the sideline to take the ball over for a touchdown.

Dartmouth kicked off and an exchange of punts took the play early to the Green territory, where Stiles on the Green 15-yard line recovered a fumble by Hill, playing the first time this year. Switzer on the third down threw a pass from the five-yard line to Stofer, who grounded it for a touchdown. Stofer converted from placement to put the Varsity in the lead in the first 7 minutes of play. For the rest of the quarter the teams battled on fairly even terms near the center of the field with much of the play in the air.

As the second quarter opened, the Green forced the play into Red territory, twice getting to the six-yard line before Handrahan caught Switzer's punt on his own 36-yard line, ran it back to the 48, and made four more on a charge through the line. Then, from a double wing back formation Handrahan handed the ball to Chamberlain on an apparent reverse. The latter, however, faded back and tossed a perfect 40-yard pass straight down the middle to Matsinger, who took it 23 yards over the goal line to complete the 52-yard march for a touchdown. Hagerman's placement kick for the extra point went wide.

Dartmouth's kick-off was called back and penalized 5 yards for offside, but taken by Irving on the Cornell 15-yard line and run back to the 36. Here the Varsity opened up a brilliant passing attack which was to net them 64 yards and Stofer's second touchdown. The southpaw shot a pass to the right to Irving who made a magnificent catch, almost taking it out of Chamberlain's hands, and ran to the Green's 34-yard line. A second pass, Stofer to Condon, took the ball to the 18-yard stripe, and Switzer, back as if to toss another, went around right end instead for a 3-yard gain. Stofer then made the third successful pass, to Condon, for first down eight yards from the goal line. On the next play Stofer betook himself to the end zone to receive Switzer's pass for the touchdown, which he again converted from placement, making the score 14-6.

Cornell's kick was run back to the Dartmouth 35, but the Green team was unable to gain and Nunn slashed through to block Captain Hill's punt and recover the ball on the Indians' 18-yard line. Switzer advanced the ball 5 yards on the first play, but a fumble and recovery by Hack Wilson brought a loss of 7 yards which neither Stofer nor Switzer could overcome with passes for another touchdown. Dartmouth, taking the ball on downs, was battling to hold position on their own 20 as the half ended.

Hold in Second Half

During the second half the spectators had plenty of thrills in the Red's alert defensive play and Dartmouth's desperate attempts to score. Cornell's kick-off was run back to midfield, and after several unsuccessful attempts to gain, Dartmouth kicked over the goal line. The Red team too was forced to kick out of danger, and a series of three fumbles by Dartmouth, the last recovered by Condon, opened the way for another Red passing attack which brought the play to the Green 10-yard line. Dartmouth held, however, and kicked, bucked, and passed out of danger twice. Near the end of the third quarter, after Cornell had punted over the Dartmouth goal line, Bragg, on the first play after he had come in for Irving at right end, recovered Aieta's fumble on the Green 10-yard line. A gallant goal line stand headed by Nairne and Ray, however, turned back the Red drive and gave Dartmouth the ball on their own 15 as the quarter ended.

The Green team worked desperately in the third, but the Cornell defense held them well in Dartmouth territory. Punts and passes were of no avail, the Red line and backs taking out their men neatly and with dispatch to protect their hard-earned lead. Finally, with less than three minutes to go, Chamberlain, on his own 26-yard stripe, shot a long pass for Handrahan toward the Crescent and the east side line. Switzer, cutting in short, intercepted it on the Dartmouth 42, stiff-armed the first Green line of defense, shook off the second without a blocker before him, and ran 58 yards down the very line to stagger over the goal as the last desperate Indian tackler threw him off balance. Stofer converted again from placement, doubling the season's previous total score, and bringing it for this game to 21-6. Cornell's kick was brought back to Dartmouth's 34 and they kicked to Cornell's 24, with the ball and the game safely in the Varsity's possession as the whistle blew.

The story of Cornell's supremacy is scarcely told by the statistics, which reveal that the Red made seven first downs to Dartmouth's three, gained 103 yards by rushing to 72 for the Green, and completed six of 16 passes for a total gain of 72 yards and two touchdowns, as compared to Dartmouth's completing four of 19 attempts for 112 yards

Team Works Well

The real story lies in the defensive play of the Varsity line, which yielded one first down by rushing, and in the Red's defensive backfield play. Cornell intercepted three Dartmouth passes, Switzer ran back Dartmouth punts for 121 yards as compared to Dartmouth's 90 yards in runbacks of Cornell punts, and Cornell recovered all three of her fumbles as well as four of Dartmouth's five loose balls.

Captain Walt Switzer played a fast and heady game, and was ably assisted by Stofer and Condon, playing with an injured hip until he was replaced by Peirce in the fourth quarter. Nunn and Stiles alternately at left end played slashing games, and Hutchinson and Murdock at the tackle positions took out their men neatly throughout. For the Dartmouth team Chamberlain and Matzinger worked gallantly if vainly at the passing attack and Nairne and Ray at center were easily the stars. Coach Earle Baile made frequent substitutions throughout the game, but many were of players who had been in before; he used 24 men in all. Only one member of the Dartmouth squad, Stearns, a guard, was unable to take part because of injuries. Puterbaugh, giant tackle of last year's varsity, was also unable to play.

Of the annual series with Dartmouth which began in 1919, this is the seventh of the sixteen games that Cornell has won. Not since the days of Kaw and Pfann and Ramsey and Cassidy in 1921, '22, and '23 has the Red before this triumphed over the Green three years in succession. Curiously enough, in those years Cornell also beat Penn, defeated Saturday by Columbia.

It was a beautiful Indian summer day in Ithaca, with a slight haze and warm air but no hot sun. Schoellkopf Field had frozen Tuesday night but had thawed by Friday so it was only slightly dull and soggy. The band in their scarlet coats and black breeches added much to the occasion. They were roundly applauded as between the halves they paraded twice the length of the field, marching and playing with martial precision, once in a formation which spelled INDIAN for the benefit of the Dartmouth stands, and back as CORNELL to be read from the Crescent. After the game, as the strains of the Alma Mater echoed over the hills, the western sun came through the low-lying clouds in a blaze of orange and mauve glory as if to celebrate the end of a perfect day at Cornell.

TIE DARTMOUTH AT SOCCER

The undefeated Varsity soccer team was held by Dartmouth to a 1-1 tie on lower Alumni Field November 16 in a spectacular kicking duel. In two extra five-minute periods, the Red booters, although they seemed to have somewhat the advantage over the Green, were unable to break the tie.

The Varsity clearly commanded the ball during the first half and kept it down in the Indians territory for the greater part, but many a Red attack was broken up by the strong defense of Dartmouth's two full-backs. Both teams had exceptionally good goalies, who together with their effective defense men, contributed much in stopping any scoring threats.

After the first half, the game developed into a hard-fought and heated battle with both teams using an aggressive offense while the muddy turf and slippery ball weakened their combination play and provided frequent spills and squabbles.

In the third period Chewing dislocated his shoulder and was removed. David Dugan was moved up to the forward line from his half back post, which was filled by Pechan. The visitors late in this quarter launched a drive down the field, penetrated the Cornell defense, and made their sole score on a low well-placed boot by Haroe.

The fourth quarter saw the Red retaliate with an aggressive offense. Putting pressure on the Indians with a smart passing attack, they got the ball down in threatening territory, and Versluis knotted the count on a hard low shot into the net.

Adler and Howard Dugan both did splendid jobs in their defensive positions. The halfback men played a hard game, defensively especially, and Versluis, though less aggressive than usual, starred on the forward line.

Coach Bawlf's soccer team safely leads the Middle Atlantic League with four league games won and none lost or tied, giving them a total of 8 points. Pennsylvania is next with 6 points, having won three and lost one. If the Varsity beats or ties Haverford at Haverford on November 29, they will have won the League championship; if they lose to Haverford and Pennsylvania beats Princeton, they will tie with Penn for the League leadership.

The Dugan brothers, Howard D. '36 and David D. '37, who are important mainstays of the team, are the sons of William J. Dugan '07 of Hamburg, former secretary of the University and graduate manager of athletics. A third brother, William D. '35, is captain of the baseball team. All three were members of the hockey team last year.

BRIEF NEWS OF CAMPUS AND TOWN

TOUCHDOWN, the Cornell bear which will be remembered as the football mascot of the few years following 1915, when we beat Harvard 10-0, reappeared last week-end—but only in effigy. On the wall opposite the door of the Drill Hall Friday night for the Dartmouth hop, a life-sized painting of a bear faced that of a Dartmouth Indian. Both were the work of Sam J. Bates '36 of Wheeling, W. Va., art editor of the Widow.

APPARENTLY the bear and the Indian were happy mascots for the party in the Drill Hall, where students, fraternity house guests and some more staid members of the community, it is said, danced to the seductive strains of two orchestras far into the night. The ball was sponsored by the ROTC to help raise funds to send the band to the Penn game.

THE BEAR appears five times in the architecture of Willard Straight Hall. Outside, over the main entrance are two carved in stone, one with spectacles holding a book and the other holding a football. As one enters the building one sees over the vestibule door just inside, the head and paws of the bear again, peering over the colored Cornell emblem which hangs there. Again at the west end of Memorial Hall over the wainscoting, two small wooden bears are holding shields as parts of the carved wood decoration of the room. The story is that when Delano and Aldrich, the architects of the building, wanted some characteristic Cornell animal to use in the decorative detail of the new building, some unnamed alumnus, probably remembering Touchdown, suggested the bear as the most typical animal of the University. His significance had been all but forgotten until he was revived this year in the program of the Princeton game.

WE QUOTE again from "State and Tioga" the weekly column in the Ithaca Journal of R. B., who has lately discovered the benefits of walking before breakfast. Besides the physical benefits, which he recounts with characteristic gusto, he reports certain interesting little secrets of his neighbors which he says are to be learned as "one feels the blood surging into the roots of his hair and the cold, clean morning wind whistling down through his lungs to his very stockings." Among Rym's observations are these: "A surprisingly large number of our citizens keep a light burning in the front hall all night and some of our first families sleep with their bedroom windows open but a hand's breadth while obliging the children to keep theirs pushed to the top. Eight houses in a remote cluster on Cayuga Heights patronize five different milkmen where one could serve all eight with a considerable saving in distribution costs to all. Bluejays travel around in pairs at this time of year (perhaps they always do) and more folks sleep at the back of the house than in front."

OARSMEN elected to the Crew Club on October 24 are Donald O. Call '34 of Stafford, Thomas D. Bowes, Jr., '35 of Cynwyd, Pa., Thomas D. English '35 of Red Bank, N. J., Wilfred R. Kelly '35 of Cooperstown, Henry H. Sayles '35 of Elmira, John A. Ward '35 of Hollis, Stephen G. Burritt '36 of Hilton, James C. Forbes '36 of Shaker Heights, O., Arthur F. Glasser '36 of Paterson, N. J., Robert H. G. Grieg '36 of Port Washington, Frederick D. Hart '36 of Springfield Gardens, Herbert A. Hopper '36 of Ithaca, Frederick Peirce, Jr. '36 of Wynnwood, Pa., Arthur L. Schwab '36 of Staten Island, Robert L. Scofield '36 of Ithaca, William G. Van Arsdale '36 of Castile, Paul R. Wood '36 of Jenkintown, Pa., and John R. Young '36 of LaJolla, Cal.

WINTER COURSE students of the College of Agriculture this year number 113. Among those who have come for the twelve weeks of study until February 8 are ten graduates from Cornell, Syracuse, Pennsylvania, Union Seminary, Seton Hall, Hartwick, Yale, and Harvard; and seven others who have had college training. The students represent 43 counties of New York State and seven other states: Connecticut, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Vermont, and West Virginia.

SIX WINTER COURSE students have received scholarships. The four Beatty Agricultural Scholarships, established by the late Harrison L. Beatty and open only to residents of Chenango County, went to Leland A. Cooley of South New Brunswick, Keath A. Davis of McDonough, Howard L. Williams of Bainbridge, and Robert A. Wilson of Sherburne. The two scholarships established by the Grange-League-Federation were awarded to Martin E. Giles of Scottsville and Arthur Calhoun of Corfu.

A BENEDICTINE MONK, musician of note, Dom Anselm Hughes of Nashdom Abbey of the English Episcopal Church, was a visitor to the Campus on November 12. Father Hughes is one of the principal contributors on mediaeval subjects to Groves Dictionary of Music, and is in this country as a representative of the British Plainsong and Mediaeval Society. He was entertained by Professors Otto Kinkeldey and Paul J. Weaver as he was enroute to lecture at Wells College.

SCARAB, senior honorary society of the College of Agriculture, held a smoker for the Faculty of the College in Willard Straight Hall on November 14. Professor Harry H. Love, PhD '09 told of his work in China and of the many Cornellians who are active there. Bo I. B. Adler '35 of Ithaca welcomed the guests and told something of the purposes of the society.

DR. LOVE was also the speaker at the second of the series of bi-weekly coffee hours given by the Cosmopolitan Club, the evening of Sunday, November 11.

FOR THREE DAYS last week Ithaca had a foretaste of winter, with snow, icy streets, and cold winds such as its residents expect somewhat later. Large flakes began to fall on Monday and they stayed on to make the roads slippery and the ground white, with the mercury hovering around 20 and lower until Thursday, when it began to warm up to make the Indian summer Saturday for the game.

RAILROAD maintenance students in the College of Engineering last week observed some of the practical problems of the subject when they travelled to the Sayre shops of the Lehigh Valley Railroad on November 14, to spend four hours there under the direction of railroad officials.

THE NINTH ANNIVERSARY of the opening of Willard Straight Hall was celebrated with a huge cake and candles and a pleasant reception to all students on Sunday afternoon, November 18. The event was arranged by the Board of Managers with the cooperation of the Student Council and the Women's Self-Government Association. Mrs. Farrand cut the birthday cake, from which the three hundred or more guests were served. Foster M. Coffin '12, director of the Hall, spoke briefly of its role as a living part on Campus life, and Dorothy B. Sarnoff '35 of Brooklyn and E. Laurence Burrows, Grad, of Ithaca sang, accompanied at the piano by William F. Detwiler '35 of Pittsburgh, Pa.

THE SAGE CHAPEL PREACHER on November 25 will be the Rev. William E. Brooks, D.D., of the First Presbyterian Church, Morgantown, W. Va.

OF THE 283 freshman women at the University this year, 135, or 47.7 percent, have parents who are college graduates. Thirty-nine of them have parents who attended Cornell. Sixteen countries are the birthplaces of the 43 who are foreign born, among them Poland, Austria, Germany, Russia, England, Denmark, Ireland, Lithuania, Finland, and Roumania.

OBITUARY

DR. C. WILSON SMITH, who was assistant professor of education and Secretary of the College of Arts and Sciences from 1923 to 1926, died of a heart attack October 28, 1934, in Halifax, Nova Scotia. He had been since 1928 professor of education at Dalhousie University. Professor Smith was born in Cincinnati, O., March 16, 1889. He attended the University of Cincinnati and received the degree of LL.B. from the University of Colorado in 1910. He practiced law in Denver from 1911 to 1914, entered the University of Missouri and received his A.B. degree there in 1918, being instructor of English from 1917 to 1921. In 1923 he received the degree of Ed.M. at Harvard and came to Cornell that fall. While here he took active interest in student affairs and was greatly interested in the informal study plan instituted by the Faculty of Arts and Sciences in March, 1924. He resigned in June, 1926, to continue his studies at Harvard, where he received the degree of Doctor of Education in 1927. In 1927-8 he was research assistant at Harvard and the next year became professor of education at Dalhousie University. In the summer of 1924 he married Olive Hawkins of St. Joseph, Mo., who survives him and is carrying on his classes at Dalhousie for the rest of the year. Professor Smith was a member of Beta Theta Pi and of Phi Delta Kappa, professional fraternity in education.

GEORGE ALBERT DAGWELL, JR., '93 died October 2, 1934, at the age of 62 at his home, 423 Cooper Street, Utica, N. Y. He entered the Department of Civil Engineering from Lansingburgh, N. Y. the fall of '89, but left the University before the end of the year.

WINIFRED IRVINE WOOLFORD '17 died suddenly November 5 at her home in South Orange, N. J., and was buried in Ithaca. She was the daughter of late Judge Frank Irvine '80, former Dean of the Law School, and Mrs. Irvine. Winifred Irvine was born June 6, 1896, in Ithaca, and attended the Ithaca High School, entering the College of Arts and Sciences in 1913 and receiving the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1917. In the fall of 1918, to have a share in war service, Miss Irvine went with Gertrude Thilly '17 and Mary Bancroft '18 to Washington to work for the Government Ordnance Department. She was married July 16, 1919, to Curtis S. Woolford, Pennsylvania '15, of Baltimore, who had been a Lieutenant in the Army and assigned for some time to duty at the School of Military Aeronautics at the University. Mrs. Woolford is survived by her mother, who lives at 110 Stewart Avenue, Ithaca; her husband; a son, Curtis Woolford, Jr., born June 16, 1919; and by her sister, Mrs. Clarence Pope (Lida Irvine) '13, of Orange, N. J. She was a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma and of the University Club of the Oranges.

DOROTHY L. SCHEIDT '33 died at her home in Buffalo June 28, 1934. She was born February 17, 1912, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Scheidt, 251 Minnesota Avenue, Buffalo, N. Y., and entered the College of Agriculture in 1929 from Bennett High School, graduating in 1933 with the Bachelor of Science degree. At the University she was active in sports playing three years on the women's soccer team and being manager successively of track, baseball and lacrosse. During her senior year she was a member of the Women's Athletic Association Council and Class Treasurer. She was a member of the Junior Advisory Council and Class Secretary in her junior year, and a member of the Women's Musical Clubs for three years. She was awarded a Roberts Scholarship, and was a member of Kappa Delta. Her mother survives her.

Concerning THE FACULTY

PROFESSOR FRED A. BARNES '97 is president of the local section of the American Society of Civil Engineers. "Engineers Day" in Ithaca was November 17, when members of the Society from hereabouts were offered a technical program in the forenoon and evening and attended the Dartmouth game in the afternoon.

EDWARD M. PALMQUIST '31, assistant in botany, was the winner of a new Ford car for the best answers to questions propounded by Treman, King & Company about the car and the service offered by the store. He attributes his success to a sleepless night when coffee had kept him awake to think about the contest. Professor Bristow Adams was one of the judges.

THE CREIGHTON CLUB, named for the late Professor James E.
